CERTIFIED TRAIN THE TRAINER CONFERENCES (2 Days)

Certified Train the Trainer conferences are held yearly - these are two days of intensive training sessions intended to provide Bulli Ray Occupational Dog Bite Safety (ODBS) certification. This certification can be used by in-house safety leaders that need to conduct training within their company or organization. Attendees will leave with the tools to create a customized ODBS training and curriculum specifically designed for your company.

Attendees will be trained using the tools and materials to successfully evaluate and assess risk of attack, defend against single dog and pack attacks, identify breeds that pose a threat, and effectively identify and report dangerous dog attack and potential attack situations. Train the trainer conferences may be scheduled at a company's onsite training location if six or more attendees sign up for a TTT conference.

Dog bite safety, like any other worthwhile educational endeavor is a process of disseminating information and knowledge on a regular basis. Follow through and repetition are especially important when human life and safety are at stake.
